

Graziella Marras graduated in Environmental and Territory Engineering from the University of Cagliari (Italy). In 2011 she achieved Ph.D. with the addition title of “Doctor Europaeus”, at University of Cagliari, PhD course in Geoengineering and Environmental Technologies.

She has been presenting author in several congresses, and reviewer for international journals.

She is correspondent for the Heritage Stones Subcommittee established as a Task Group by the International Union of Geological Sciences.

She is currently researcher in the D.I.C.A.Ar. (Cagliari) for investigation, fields of research being: Mining, Natural Stone Technology and Waste Recycling.